DETAILED ACTION

1. Acknowledgment is made of Amendment filed November 1, 2006.

Allowable Subject Matter

2. Claims 1-9 and 11-14 are allowed.
3. The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance:

Kennedy et al. (US 3,580,420) teaches, as shown in figure 1, the numeral 10 generally designates a fuel oil delivery truck of conventional construction which includes a multi-compartment tank 12 having compartments 14, 16 and 18 with each compartment having a closed opening 20 in the top thereof which also is of conventional construction with the opening having a removable closure. A pump 22 is communicated with the compartments 14, 16 and 18 through suction lines or pipes 24, 26 and 28 with each suction pipe having a manually controlled cutoff valve 30 which is located in a convenient position for access by the operator so that the pump 22 may be selectively communicated with one of the compartments 14, 16 and 18.

Beaudoin et al. (US 6,047,250) teaches a system and associated methods for monitoring fluid distribution for heavy duty vehicles. The system advantageously includes a first handheld RF data communications terminal. The handheld data terminal preferably includes a portable housing readily adapted to be positioned in the hand of a driver of a heavy duty vehicle and a first RF transceiver connected to the portable housing for transmitting and receiving RF data communications to thereby interface with a heavy duty vehicle driver to collect data from customer fluid delivery locations. The system also includes at least one heavy duty vehicle adapted to transport fluid and a second vehicle data communications terminal preferably mounted to the at least one heavy duty vehicle. The second data communications terminal preferably includes a second RF transceiver for transmitting and receiving RF data communications. The system additionally includes at least one fluid storage tank positioned at a customer fluid delivery location for receiving and storing fluid transported by the heavy duty vehicle. The fluid storage tank includes a tank identifier for identifying the tank and adapted to be received by the data collection device of the first handheld data collection terminal. The system further includes a main office data monitoring and dispatching data terminal is associated with a main office.

Applicant's remarks on page 8, lines 14+ of Amendment filed November 1, 2006 have overcome the prior art rejection.

The best prior art of record, taken alone or in combination thereof, fails to teach or fairly suggest a fluid delivery apparatus having, in conjunction with other limitations, at least first and second fluid flow ports, the first fluid flow port adapted to connect to a first fluid receiving opening, second fluid flow port adapted to connect to a second fluid receiving opening, the first port and second port upstream of the first and second subsidiary storage tanks, first and second electronically readable tags, each tag having readable information, the first tag's readable information identifying the first port, second tag's information identifying the second port, each tag's information readable by a control unit without having to hardwire a CPU to either of the tags, the first and second tags to reduce the risk that either of the ports will be put into communication with an incompatible one of the first or second subsidiary storage tanks as set forth in the independent claim.

Any comments considered necessary by applicant must be submitted no later than the payment of the issue fee and, to avoid processing delays, should preferably accompany the issue fee. Such submissions should be clearly labeled "Comments on Statement of Reasons for Allowance."
